

ONE SURVIVOR.

The Alexandre Pelton, of the Haytian Navy, Founders.

One of the Sailors of the Ninety-three on Board Lives

To Narrate the Terrible Story—A Diplomatic Party Consisting of Gen. Moliner, M. De Jean, and Mr. Cohen, and the Cause Known.

New York, Sept. 23.—The Alexandre Pelton, one of the new gunboats of the Haytian navy, founded on September 6, near Cape Tiburon, and only one of her crew of ninety men survived to tell the story. The news of the loss of the war vessel was broadcast here Friday by passengers on the Dutch steamer Prinz Willem I., which arrived from Port au Prince. The Alexandre Pelton was the last of the gunboats constructed for the Haytian navy. She was built in Havre for the government of Hayti only a few months ago, and left Port au Prince September 6, bound for the city of San Domingo. She had on board as passengers Gen. Moliner, special Dominican plenipotentiary to Hayti; M. D. Jean, consul to San Domingo, and Mr. Cohen, formerly Haytian Minister to Mexico. The party were going to San Domingo to settle the final terms of an agreement between Hayti and San Domingo. The Alexandre Pelton carried ninety sailors, marines and officers, besides the diplomatic party. She foundered on September 6 at 4 o'clock in the morning, near Cape Tiburon. Why it was that she sank nobody knows.

Her sole survivor, a colored sailor, was picked up a few miles from Port au Prince on September 8. He was upon a heavy plank and was sitting with a pair of oars. He was an ignorant man, and could not give an intelligent account of how the accident took place. The negro said that it was in the early morning. The gunboat began to go down bow first. Nearly all those on board sank with the vessel. A few jumped and kept up until they were too exhausted to struggle longer. The survivor found the plank and two or three comrades. He floated about for a day and a half, when he was picked up by a small sailing vessel. The news of the loss of the steamer cast a gloom over the town of Port au Prince. Many of the gunboats officers and crew had families in the town. The citizens of Port au Prince are in hope that the survivors of the crew may have escaped. There are no reefs and shoals in the neighborhood where the vessel foundered, according to official charts. The loss of the vessel was a great blow to the Haytian navy, and the loss of the Alexandre Pelton was one of the most serious.

Gen. Moliner was a gallant soldier and popular in Port au Prince. Shortly before his departure on the ill-fated gunboat a dinner was given in his honor by U. S. Minister Durham. "On that occasion," said Mr. Durham, "a reporter found when he met him that the Prince Willem I., the general spoke in an exceedingly pathetic manner. He had been complaining on account of his many distinguished services to his country. 'It is true,' he said, 'that I have fought and suffered much for my native land, but I have never lived for my family and for those dependent on me. In all these years my constant thought has been of them and what would be their should I be taken from them.'"

The diplomatic party were cordially treated while in Port au Prince, and many people were glad to hear of the day that the Alexandre Pelton steamed out of the harbor. The Alexandre Pelton was one of the best of the Haytian navy, and cost $250,000.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION!

Too High Pressure.

In these days of keen competition in every line, when the business man is compelled to bend his intellect and every energy to the success of his business, the clerk, book-keeper, professional man and laborer, to drive themselves at a terrific rate, there can be but one result—an explosion, which, if not resulting in immediate death, leaves them with shattered brains and bodies. They are running at too high pressure. The strain is too great. Something must and does give way. This is equally true of women. Though their sphere is more limited, they have their daily burdens, frets, and worries, and the result is the same as with their male companions.

This condition is growing more every day. The rapidity of its increase is awful to contemplate. Our homes, hospitals, and insane asylums are full of our best physicians, and are being crowded still further. There is but one solution of the matter. Recourse must be taken to the use of the Milne's Restorative Nerve, and take the necessary measures to overcome it. If you have falling memory, bad flashes, dizziness, nervous or sick headache, biliousness, irritability, melancholy, sleeplessness, fainting, nervous dyspepsia, epilepsy, etc., know that any one of them is but a symptom of the calamity that may befall you, and even though you have used so-called remedies and treated with reputed physicians with little or no benefit, give Dr. Milne's Restorative Nerve a trial. It is the only remedy that may be depended upon for nervous disorders.

Two years ago I used Dr. Milne's Restorative Nerve in a case of nervous prostration, in which I had been sick with catarrh of the bladder five years in the hands of our best physicians, to try it together with Dr. Milne's Restorative Nerve. Several of our best physicians, and I am happy to say, that it is a positive cure from opiate and dangerous drugs. Free trial at druggists, or by mail.

BECAME A SQUAW.

A Pretty White Girl's Freak—She Leaves a Luxurious Home for a Camp.

BRIDGEMAN, N. J., Sept. 23.—In early spring a band of Canadian Indians came to this village to establish a basket making industry. There were forty or more of them and they came from near the city of Montreal. Next door to the store they opened an store was the cottage of S. L. Gillen, a renegade clerk. With him dwelt even step niece, pretty Mamie Gillen, she is 16 tall and well-formed. From her father she inherits a dark, glossy hair, which she wears in an Indian squaw's appearance. When the Indians arrived here they attracted no little attention from the people. Mamie seemed to be infatuated with the process of making baskets, but nothing was thought of it. She made them with some of the young squaws and braces and was with them constantly in the evenings after she had finished her work in the office. Mamie frequently spoke of the desire to learn to make baskets and live as the Indians did.

Now she is missing, and she is believed to be with her dusky friends. The Indians left for Canada on Monday of last week. Mamie disappeared the same day and no trace of her movements can be found by her relatives. Before leaving her home Mamie packed up all of her clothing and her little trinkets and succeeded in getting them out of the house without being detected by her relatives. No word has been received from the missing girl since she disappeared. It is not board the train with the Indians, but her relatives are positive in their belief that she has gone to Canada with them.

The leader of the tribe was a tall, handsome young fellow, who was known as Chief Masta. The missing girl is well educated and bright. Her relatives have not taken and will not take any step to bring her back from her squaw life.

BUNCOING BY WHOLESALE.

A Boston Church Member Accused of Swindling Banks out of $175,000.

BOSTON, Sept. 23.—Thomas Richardson, formerly of the firm of Richardson & Dennie, the well-known leather dealers, of Commonwealth avenue, and for years a prominent church-member, is wanted by the police. His servants say his wife is in Newport, but they positively refuse to tell where Mr. Richardson is. This is because there is an indictment warrant out for his arrest. He is charged with securing by means of false pretenses from one firm alone the sum of $175,000. Richardson was the partner of the late firm of Richardson & Dennie, which he had not heard from Mr. Richardson since June 13, when he was in New York harbor. He had never found anything wrong about his partner's business transactions, but the last ten years had been very unfortunate for Richardson. Richardson was the financial manager, and he (Mr. Dennie) had been assured by eight or nine bank presidents that there was no charge against him, generally. One of these bank presidents when asked about the matter Friday expressed himself in very vague terms concerning the missing man.

THE STEAMER RHEA

Sinks in a Collision With Another Boat at Paducah, Ky.

PADUCAH, Ky., Sept. 23.—Reports received here Friday night bring the news of a disastrous steamboat collision on the Ohio river. The steamer T. T. Rhea of Evansville ran into the Grace Morris and sank in ten feet of water. The reports indicate that the crew of the wrecked steamer escaped and that no lives were lost.

The details of the accident are extremely meager, there being no communication by wire to the coast of the collision. The T. T. Rhea was a passenger and freight packet, and is owned in Evansville. The loss will be in the neighborhood of $25,000.
